

Falco peregrinus Peregrine Falcon

World's largest urban population of nesting Peregrine falcons is in New York City. Typically they nest on tall buildings and bridges.

- 16 mating couples live in NYC
- 2 nesting sites located in proximity
- 1 nest located on Brooklyn Bridge

Myotis lucifugus Little Brown Bat

One of the most common bats of New York City that is being wiped out by white-nose syndrome. Typically live in tree hollows, rock crevices and bridges.

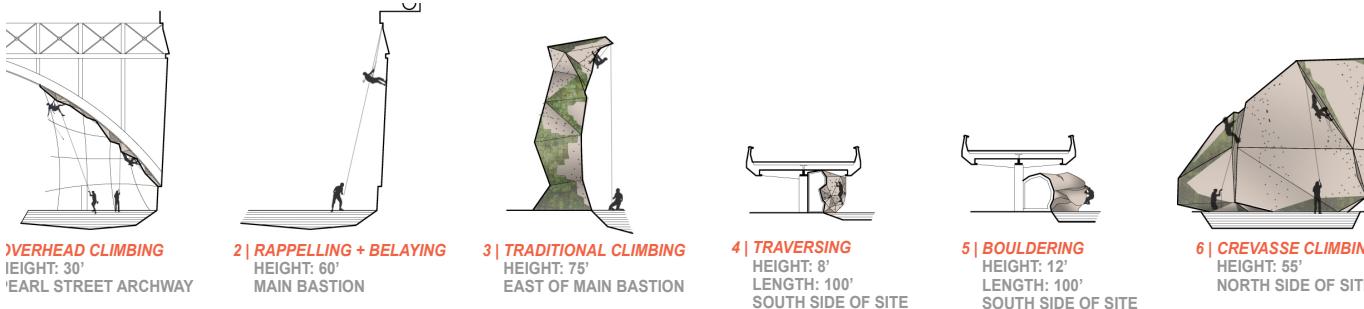

Danaus plexippus Monarch Butterfly

Manhattan offers an annual stop-over for butterflies migrating from Canada to Mexico.

Apis mellifera Western Honey Bee

Bee-keeping was legalised in NYC in 2010.

OVERHEAD CLIMBING
HEIGHT: 30'
'EARL STREET ARCHWAY

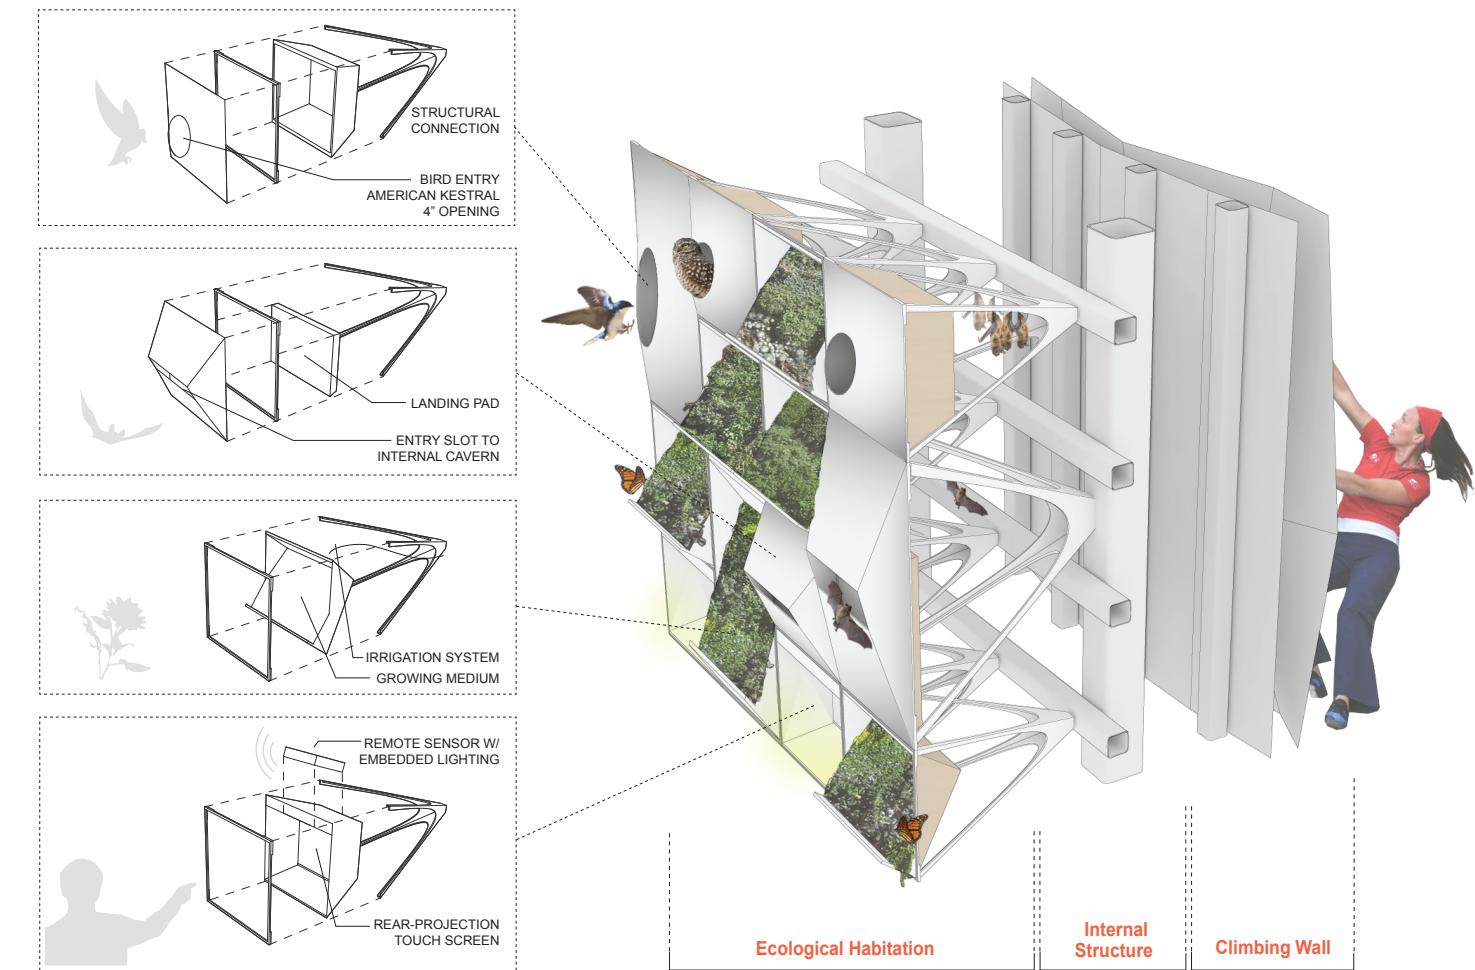

2 | RAPPELLING + BELAYING
HEIGHT: 60'
MAIN BASTION

3 | TRADITIONAL CLIMBING
HEIGHT: 75'
EAST OF MAIN BASTION

4 | TRAVERSING
HEIGHT: 8'
LENGTH: 100'
SOUTH SIDE OF SITE

5 | BOULDERING
HEIGHT: 12'
LENGTH: 100'
SOUTH SIDE OF SITE

6 | CREVASS CLIMBING
HEIGHT: 55'
NORTH SIDE OF SITE

Ecological Habitation

Internal Structure

Climbing Wall

